ChANGING PERSPECTIVES OF
THE INDUS CIVILIZATION:
RECENT DISCOVERIES IN PAKISTAN AND INDIA

A TALK BY PROFESSOR JONATHAN MARK KENOYER
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN, MADISON

3 November 2011
THURSDAY 11:30 – 1:00
MICHAEL AMES THEATRE, MUSEUM OF ANTHROPOLOGY

Professor Jonathan Mark Kenoyer is a professor in anthropology at the University of Wisconsin-Madison; and he also serves as director of the Center for South Asia there. Professor Kenoyer has been excavating at Harappa, Pakistan since 1986 as field director of the Harappa Archaeological Research Project in collaboration with the Department of Archaeology and Museums of the government of Pakistan. His primary focus is on the Indus Valley Civilization and he has worked in both Pakistan and India since 1974. His interests are in ancient technologies and crafts and socio-economic and political organization, as well as religion. These interests have led him to study a broad range of cultural periods in South Asia, as well as other regions of the world. Professor Kenoyer has been recently elected as a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, one of the highest honour awarded to the most accomplished scholars in arts and sciences. In this lecture, Professor Kenoyer will present recent discoveries from excavations in Pakistan and India and discuss important insights these discoveries shed on the development of the Indus Civilization.

Refreshments and reception will be served following colloquium in the community lounge at the Museum of Anthropology.

This presentation is co-sponsored by the Department of Anthropology, the Department of Asian Studies, and the Museum of Anthropology.
